Case study one

A bank in London requires a shorter cut-off time to allow valuable cargo to be sent from the UK at the end of the working day and arrive in New York before the bank opens the follow morning.

British Airways World Cargo has implemented a bespoke process to ensure that this challenging cut-off time is met.

Case study two

A customer in New York sends high volume and density precious metal shipments to London Heathrow. The customer wants to avoid additional costs incurred from keeping their own vault open out of business hours at London Heathrow.

British Airways World Cargo has adopted a bespoke process to ensure the shipments are available for collection in less than half the published time, preventing any negative impact to their business.
